Description

This is an original 1964 printing of the scholarly treatise on 'Early American Scientific Instruments and Their Makers' by Silvio A Bedini, published by The Museum of History and Technology - Smithsonian Institution. It contains 184 pages of text and photographs of 18th and 19th century instruments and their makers. Chapters include: The Tools of Science, The mathematical Practitioners, Instruments of Metal, Instruments of Wood, etc. This book covers a range of scientific instruments including microscopes, surveying instruments, celestial navigation instruments, orreries, telescopes, clocks, sundials, etc. Maroon cloth cover with gold imprinting of the title and the Smithsonian seal. This copy is in excellent condition with a little bit of bending of the top outside corners - front and back and a neatly pined accession code on the upper left hand corner of the inside cover. This is an important work in its original publication form. It will be very nice addition to any scientific instrument collection. High bidder pays postage and insurance.
